Acadia National Park is the northernmost and easternmost national park in the United States (Jefferson, 2012). It is also the "oldest national park east of the Mississippi River" (Jefferson, 2012, p. 17). Over the course of its history, its name has changed three times: from Sieur de Monts National Park in 1916, to Lafayette National Park in 1919, to Acadia National Park in 1929 (Jefferson, 2012). The park is located in the northern part of Maine near Bar Harbor (Maine Travel Board, 2017).
