

More than one citation in a piece of writing

Paragraph begins with your own idea.

Signal phrase with date introduces paraphrase from Trent.

Another spectacular park is Glacier National Park in Montana.

Second use of a signal phrase for Trent to introduce a direct quotation. Date is not required.

According to Trent (2015), the park was established in 1910 as the 10th national park. Trent tells us that “the rugged mountains and glacial-carved valleys give inspiration to those who travel through them” (p. 17). In fact, the park is named for its glaciers, many of which are disappearing. “In 1850, geologists estimated that there were as many as 150 glaciers within the park boundaries, while today there are only 25” (Vidraru, 2017, p. 27).

Your own idea.

Direct quotation from Vidraru includes citation.

Citation pattern starts over!

Paragraph begins with your own idea.

Glacier offers many different activities to visitors. Trent (2015) notes that the park includes historic lodges and chalets, in addition to a variety of scenic wonders. If you are interested in driving through mountainous terrain, the 50 mile-long Going-to-the-Sun Road is an engineering marvel that will take you across the Logan Pass at a height of 6,646 feet (“A Warm Welcome to Glacier National Park,” 1945). There is no shortage of hiking opportunities. Glacier has more than 700 miles of hiking trails, offering routes to stunning views of Hidden Lake and Chief Mountain, as well as the opportunity to hike long distances on the Continental Divide National Scenic Trail or the Pacific Northwest National Scenic Trail (Trent, 2015).

Signal phrase for Trent has a date because this is a new paragraph.

Paraphrase from “A Warm Welcome to Glacier National Park” includes citation.

Your own idea.

Summary from Trent includes citation.