

World Traveler

Article title

Lake McDonald, largest lake in Glacier National Park

The Glories of Glacier National Park

Terrence Trent

Author's name

Glacier National Park is one of the most well-known national parks in the United States. It boasts wonders of natural beauty that you can see at Yellowstone or Yosemite. Glacier covers over one million acres of Montana wilderness that includes mountain ranges, hundreds of lakes, and a vast array of plant and animal species. Its glories are too many to count in such a short profile, but three worth noting are Lake McDonald, Chief Mountain, and Bird Woman Falls.

Stretching out like a carpet across the Rocky Mountains, the lake McDonald may be the most beautiful of the grandeur of Glacier National Park. Formed by the park's

Page
number

18

17

16